Yokohama Triennale 2014

October, 2014

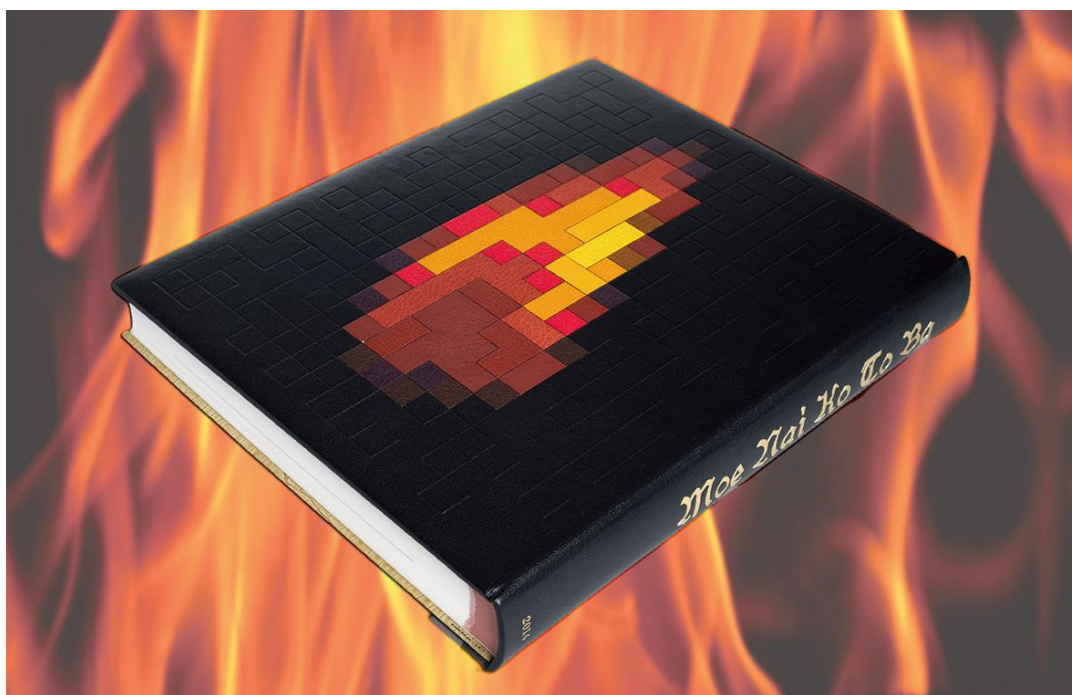

Yokohama Triennale 2014 "ART Fahrenheit 451: Sailing into the sea of oblivion" will close on November 3 with an Annihilation Performance

The Final Chapter: Burning the Only Book in the World!

Venues: Yokohama Museum of Art and Granmall Park (In front of Yokohama Museum of Art)

Yokohama Triennale 2014 will come to a close on Monday, November 3.

On the final day, Moe Nai Ko To Ba, the only book in the world especially produced for this edition of the Triennale to articulate the world of Ray Bradbury's novel Fahrenheit 451, will be burned in "The Last Annihilation Performance - Burning Moe Nai Ko To Ba."

The exhibition that is set up like a book, consisting of two introductions and eleven chapters, will close its chapters with this final performance which will be presented as an act of protest against the violation of the freedom of expression, and the requiem for all the things we have inevitably lost.

Don't miss this final performance which will mark the closing of Yokohama Triennale 2014!
